"OSALL aims to link and support everyone interested in Law Librarianship in South Africa"

EDITORIAL

The last newsletter of the year introduces the 2010-2012 OSALL Committee and includes profiles on new OSALL committee members, Keke Maldi (PR & Liaison) and Lydia Craemer (Secretary). Fanus Olivier (Chair), Gill Rademeyer (Treasurer), Mary Bruce (Listserv Administrator) and Danielle Botha (Website Administrator) will serve a further term. A warm welcome to the new members and many thanks to everyone for offering your time and skills to OSALL.

This issue includes an article by Danielle Botha on the intricacies of loose-leaf filing. Loose-leaf publications are the backbone of any South African law library. Mary Bruce's article on the use of Web 2.0 by South African legal publishers makes for an informative read. Thanks to Nico Ferreira for his ongoing list of publications noted.

Special thanks to all who contributed to the Newsletter during the past year.

And last, but not least the Committee wishes all our readers a safe and happy festive season!

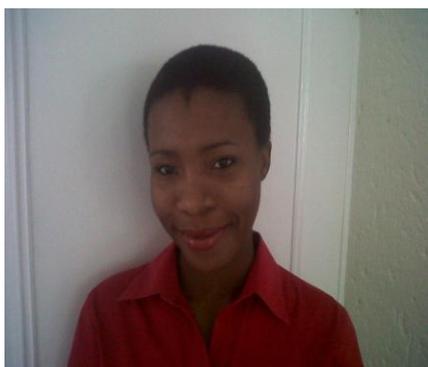

NEWS

OSALL COMMITTEE : 2010-2012

The 2010-2012 OSALL Committee consists of:

Chair: Fanus Oliver (Johannesburg Bar Library)
 Secretary: Lydia Craemer (Johannesburg Bar Library)
 PR & Liaison: Keke Maldi (YP Information Solutions)
 Treasurer: Gill Rademeyer (DLA Cliffe Dekker Hofmeyr)
 Listserv Administrator: Mary Bruce (KwaZulu-Natal Law Society)
 Website Administrator: Danielle Botha (Brink Cohen Le Roux)
 Editor: Diana Riley (Bowman Gilfillan)

Below the profiles of Keke and Lydia who are new to the Committee.

Keke Maldi (PR & Liaison)

Keke has been involved in the Library and Information management field for over 13 years and has worked as a law librarian at CTH Attorneys, BBM Attorneys and JCCI. Keke has a passion for service and quality and she currently runs her Library and Information Consultancy company called YP Information Solutions.

Lydia Craemer (Secretary)

My career in law libraries began in 1991 when I joined the Wits Law Library as a contract worker. I was responsible for liaising with Wits' Periodicals Workroom about the periodicals stock in the law library and making sure all stock was catalogued. Ruth Ward was Head of the Law Library at that time and Karen Shear her Deputy. My contract lasted 2 years, and in that time I became familiar with law texts and enjoyed the subject area. In 1993 my contract ended and I joined Wits' Periodicals Workroom as a part-time cataloguer. My working relationship with the Law Library continued because I was well versed in the law library periodical stock and became responsible for cataloguing law periodicals and Government publications. During my stay in Wits' Periodicals Workroom (which subsequently merged with the Book Cataloguing Dept and Acquisitions) I was involved in the conversion of the manual kardex to an automated system for serials control developed jointly by Wits' Periodicals Workroom and Wits' Computer and Networking Services. We worked on the cataloguing interface, the kardexing system, claims and the barcoding of issues as they arrived. In 1997/1998 I was involved in the conversion of the in-house serials control system to the Innopac serials control system. All the while keeping a beady eye on, and wrestling with, the challenges of legal periodicals!

From 1993–1999 I also did freelance library work in law firms and the Legal and Tax Division of Southern Life (now Momentum). I worked at Cheadle Thompson and Haysom until Kari Cousins was appointed as a full-time librarian. I was amazed about two months ago to encounter one of CTH's messengers who remembered me from my stint there!! In 1998 I began to look for full-time employment, and decided that the law library world was the niche for me. I joined Moodie and Roberston as their first full-time librarian in May 1999 and was with them until Oct 2008. In that time I ran a main library (Braamfontein) with three branches (Jorrisen Place, Rivonia and Randburg), which then shrank to a main library with two branches (Rivonia and Randburg), then two branches (Braamfontein and Rivonia). My colleagues were amazed that a solo librarian could juggle so many branches, but the collections were small and only required attention on a monthly basis. I handled queries from all the branches from the main library.

My affiliation with OSALL began when I started off by lurking on the listserv when job-seeking in the late 90's. In 2000, Lucy Graham saw fit to nominate me as a Committee member. Little did I know that this was the beginning of a long association with OSALL. During my first term of office I was listserv and website administrator. In 2002 I was encouraged to stay on the Committee as the listserv administrator, a portfolio I managed until 2006 when I decided it was time for fresh blood to take over the running of the listserv. I was succeeded by Mary Bruce, who has done a sterling job ever since. In my time as listserv administrator, I steered the listserv from being a Q and A tool to an educational and information source, the number of members grew steadily, we were joined by colleagues from overseas, and I was involved in the migration from Wits hosting our listserv on the Wits Sunsite server to the hosting of the listserv on Google Groups. I was chosen as the OSALL representative to go the BIALL Conference in 2005. This was an invaluable experience and I made contacts with overseas law librarians that I have managed to maintain to this day.

In 2009 I disappeared (well, almost disappeared) from the law library radar, when I decided to try a new direction and joined St Stithians' Girls College as the Girls College librarian. The Girls College is the High School for girls at Saints (as the school is known). However, I realized quickly that school libraries are not the place for me – my talents and giftings lie in the field of law librarianship and I decided to return to law as soon as possible. In late 2009, the Johannesburg Bar Library advertised a post. I applied, and they offered me the position. I served a further term at Saints to fulfil my employment obligations and joined the Bar Library in April 2010. I was received back in the fold with much delight and decided once again to offer my services to OSALL, in the capacity of secretary. At Saints I had gained the reputation of being a minute-taker of note, so this seemed like a logical portfolio to take up.

Being on the OSALL Committee has brought me many challenges and has given me many growth opportunities and fantastic colleagues. There is still more I can explore in portfolios, should I stay on after 2012 – Treasurer, PR and Liaison, Vice Chair and even Chair! I'm proud to be an OSALL member.

NEWS FROM OUR MEMBERS

Elizabeth Bourne retired from Bowman Gilfillan to the Johannesburg Bar Library. Alice Ramohlola, formerly of the South African Institute of International Relations took over from Liz as Senior Librarian based in the Sandton office of Bowman Gilfillan.

Sharon Pather-Nagy joined Edward Nathan Sonnenbergs in Umlhanga and Thulisa Kondlo from the National Prosecuting Authority joined Deneys Reitz on the 1st November 2010.

And whilst Varsha Sathianand left the coast and Shepstone & Wylie in Durban to join Eversheds, Meryl Federl joined the Cape High Court Library.

LIBRARIAN OF THE YEAR

Congratulations to Denise Nicholson, Copyright Services librarian at the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, who was elected as LIASA Librarian of the Year 2010.

As Wits Copyright Services Librarian, Denise is responsible for copyright clearances for teaching material, giving talks on copyright and plagiarism to staff and students, providing an advisory service on copyright and related matters to staff and students at Wits, as well as to the broader library and other communities. She regularly monitors the legislative situation in SA and global trends to promote and lobby for better copyright laws for education, research, libraries and persons with sensory-disabilities. She has published papers, book chapters, articles, blogs and portals on copyright and related topics. She has contributed to various international and regional research documents, position papers and statements and has been cited in several publications. She has presented at many conferences and seminars locally, regionally and abroad and is well-recognised for her online global information service "Copyright & A2K Issues", which has more than 1700 subscribers at present.

A CLOSER LOOK AT THE INTRICACIES OF LOOSE-LEAF FILING

by Danielle Botha
dbotha@bclr.com

It happened again. Once again a very confused lawyer showed me her loose-leaf publication of which she could not make head or tail of the way the legislation was set out. On closer inspection, and a comparison with my library copy, it came to light that there were certain inaccuracies in the loose-leaf filing done by the lawyer's secretary. I requested she leave it with me to sort out, and on doing a page-by-page check, to my surprise about 50 pages had to come out to make this book accurate! Which brings me to the reason for this article – to bring attention to the fact that loose-leaf filing should be done by qualified or experienced librarians or library staff. There is a general idea that loose-leaf filing can be done by absolutely anyone (especially other administrative staff members), whether they have done it before or not. Loose-leaf filing, however, like using a computer, is a skill that needs to be learnt, and an important one at that. A mistake can cost a lawyer his case.

To be a good loose-leaf filer, the following qualities are vital: high levels of concentration for long periods, extreme attention to detail, and, hopefully, an enjoyment of loose-leaf filing. Loose-leaf filing, while it may become tedious if done eight hours straight, actually makes a welcome break from the mental challenge of daily research. It is also very relaxing and forces the filer to concentrate on the filing only, instead of all the worries/stresses of the day. When paying attention while filing, a librarian can learn the content of the loose-leaves, which will assist later in research as he/she will build up a knowledge of the subject matter of the publications. Librarians tend to grasp the importance of loose-leaf filing, while a non-librarian may simply see it as another job to get over with as quickly as possible. I believe this plays a role in why non-librarians are often not successful at loose-leaf filing. Doing loose-leaf filing in a hurry often leads to mistakes. Doing it at a busy switchboard does not work!

Let's take for example Jones and Buckle "The Civil Practice of the Magistrates' Court in South Africa, Vol II". Under the section: "The Rules and Commentary", the first 11 pages are numbered "Rules 1" to "Rules 11". Immediately after that, the pages are numbered "Rule 1 - 1 - onwards". So unless you're wide awake, you will file Rule 4-1 after Rules 4 instead of replacing Rule 4-1 a little further one. And unless you're watching your filing instructions carefully, you will not notice this by the time you reach Rule 4-1.

Another tricky section is Roman numerals. I doubt very much these are taught at school anymore, judging from reactions I have received from vacation students etc. when confronted with these "undecipherable" numbers.

Symbol	Value
I	1 (one) (unus)
V	5 (five) (quinque)
X	10 (ten) (decem)
L	50 (fifty) (quinquaginta)
C	100 (one hundred) (centum)
D	500 (five hundred) (quingenti)
M	1,000 (one thousand) (mille)

When filing, do you know your bis from your quat? Here's a quick guide to numbers adverbs:

1. Semel (once)
2. Bis (twice)
3. Ter (thrice etc.)
4. Quater
5. Quinquies
6. Sexies
7. Septies
8. Octies
9. Novies
10. Decies

Another fact to mention is that the method of loose-leaf filing is different for each publisher. LexisNexis have combined the filing instructions within the Key, highlighting any changes to be made in bold, while Juta still keeps them separate. In addition, overseas publications filing instructions differ from local publications filing instructions. Instead of inserting a dash under the "Insert new pages" column to indicate a page needs to be removed, the pages to be removed are included under the "Remove old pages" column. If you are not aware of this, you will not notice that certain pages need to be removed.

Here are some tips for more efficient loose-leaf filing:

- Always put in the new pages before taking out the old one. This way, if you make a mistake, you will at least still have the old page instead of a completely missing page.
- Wearing thimbles on the thumbs and middle fingers while filing greatly increases speed and accuracy of filing – there is less of a chance that pages stick together, they minimize paper cuts and reduce wear and tear on the fingers. You may get some strange looks and questions from your lawyers, though!
- Working in a quiet environment – while most libraries are (hopefully) quiet, the tendency to open-plan offices is not conducive to loose-leaf filing. Distractions must be minimized.
- Soft classical music in the background – this may not work for everyone, but it does tend to keep the mind from wandering when filing. Don't knock it till you've tried it. Rap, pop or rock do not have the same effect!
- Good (preferably natural) lighting – this cannot be overestimated, as eye-strain is a guarantee when trying to read the tiny numbers in bad light for hours on end.
- Keeping interruptions to a minimal – try to do loose-leaf filing on less busy days, rather than trying to squeeze it in between a lot of research. Rather do normal filing on busy days, such as your accounts.
- Pay attention to the content while filing – make sure the pages follow onto each other. Many mistakes can be prevented this way.

If you have an assistant, you can do a quick spot-check that your update has been filed more or less correctly. Simply compare the pages taken out, to the list of pages that had to be taken out. In this way you can quickly spot when an incorrect or extra page has been taken out. This doesn't take long, and has saved me from having to order missing pages numerous times.

And if you have any doubt of any of the above, just give a copy of Juta's Income Tax to an administrative person who has never done loose-leaf filing before, and observe how quickly it is handed back to you in frustration!

MUNICIPAL BY-LAWS – SABINET OFFERS A MUCH NEEDED ACCURATE RECORD ... GROWING ARCHIVE

Just like the laws of the country, Municipal By-laws and policies must be obeyed by the general public and businesses. To ensure that we stay on the right side of the law, it's important to know what these rules are. Sabinet's latest information product, Sabinet Municipal By-laws, is designed to assist consumers, corporates and even municipalities and government entities to stay up to date.

A Municipal By-law is a set of rules or legislation passed by the council of a municipality on a provincial level. It regulates matters the municipality is authorised to administer within its area of jurisdiction. A municipality derives the powers to pass a By-law from the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, which gives certain specified powers and competencies to local government.

By-laws cover various important local government issues such as public roads, parking grounds, public open spaces, street trading, public health, cemeteries and crematoria, emergency services, etc. These issues impact the private lives of individuals, as well as the daily operations of corporate organisations.

Due to renaming and reshuffling of municipalities jurisdictions -- and the shifting of provinces borders -- it has become increasingly difficult for municipalities to keep track of the By-laws in force and applicable to their area of jurisdiction. This situation has been ongoing for quite some time and has become an increasingly overwhelming challenge.

Sabinet decided that by creating the Sabinet Municipal By-laws product we would not only be providing some certainty and structure for the municipalities, but be providing individuals and other institutions access, in one environment, to the most current laws which are applicable to and regulate their everyday life and business activities.

In order to ensure that the By-laws remain up to date and the most current By-laws are provided to our subscribers, we provide a weekly newsletter with notifications of any changes or newly enforced By-laws.

We trust that by making this product available, individuals and companies will have easier access to this vital information and will be more empowered with knowledge of their rights and responsibilities and their position with regard to issues which relate to their daily living and business activities. We also hope that this will provide municipalities and government institutions with the structure and information that they need to ensure that these laws are kept up to date and are applicable to our ever changing environment - addressing the most basic daily issues and concerns faced by society.

DOTTING THE i AND CROSSING THE t

SOUTH AFRICAN LEGAL PUBLISHERS USE WEB 2.0
TOO

by Mary Bruce
mary@lawsoc.co.za

Web 2.0 is hardly news but it has marked one of the biggest turning points in the history of the Internet and we haven't looked back. The power of the Internet was symbolically moved into the hands of the public and it's been fascinating to watch how responsibly it's been handled on the whole and how a new self-imposed etiquette has developed. Just last week we were advised via Twitter that social networks now account for a greater part of the Internet than pornography.

Web 2.0 has fascinated me from its inception. Having been afforded the opportunities to address the audience on the topic The practical application of blog- and wiki-technology in the South African legal information community at the SAOUG/OSALL/SLIS Conference on 23 June 2005 and to contribute a column, Using Web 2.0 and Social Networking to Weave a Web of Perception that appeared in the OSALL Newsletter of December 2007 (http://www.osall.org.za/newsletters/Newsletter_2007_Nov_Dec_Vol_18_no_4.pdf), my interest had been piqued and hasn't waned. Regular readers of this column will have read my comments on Twitter, Facebook and blogging but, with the end of 2010 approaching all too rapidly and talk of Web 3.0 cropping up more frequently, it seems timeous to step back from the individual and generally personal feeds to which we are likely most accustomed and be aware of the information well-known names in the legal publishing world are making available via Web 2.0 applications. Sadly, all too few of us seem to be availing ourselves of these services.

In order to make the playing field as level as possible, this article is based on the information that was accessible online on 18 November 2010. I also asked each of the publishers for any comments relating to their implementation of Web 2.0 services that they would like to be drawn to the attention of readers. In this article, Web 2.0 refers specifically to Facebook, Twitter and blogs.

Because of my reputation for fair play and despite my determination to break free of the habit of alphabetising almost anything that comes my way, the publishers are arranged in that order. [We are moving home next week and the biggest test will be whether our extensive collection of herbs and spices finds itself arranged by another system. I excuse this inexplicable habit on the grounds that at least I can find things in the dark if/when Eskom fails us - again].

<http://www.jutalaw.co.za/>

I was unable to locate any online references to Juta Law's use of social media but the response replicated below from Wayne Staples, JutaLaw's Marketing Manager, gives us much to look forward to.

"Juta Law is starting to move into the social media space and we are currently revamping our website and once this is launched we will provide links to facebook, twitter etc. We have a twitter account for Legalbrief and have sent a couple of tweets but have decided to hold back on this to put in place the editorial capacity to ensure that we are able to offer a sustainable twitter feed once we start promoting this as a regular service.

"We have been exploring social media over the past year and Wendy Moulang who is our Special Projects Manager, has conducted a series of workshops for our publishers, sales and marketing and productions teams on what social media entails and how we would - or should - be leveraging these powerful tools to market our services and product offerings to customers who wish to communicate with us and who are willing to receive communication from us.

"We are strongly of the opinion that we will make selective use of social media to further build relationships with our customers by providing content that is of real benefit to legal and information professionals and to this end we are at pains to ensure that we understand the challenges and opportunities presented. Much of our existing communication with customers, including advance notifications and publication information and new book notifications where customers have invited us to communicate with them will be easily migrated to social media channels when these become available next year.

"We currently have a Juta Linked-in Profile".

Nothing for me to add except I've moved up to make space in the front row for all who will be watching this space.

<http://www.lexisnexis.co.za/>

I didn't find LexisNexis (South Africa) on Facebook but, to be fair, I find Facebook's internal search facility a bit of a nightmare.

Twitter - @LexisNexisSA

"LexisNexis is South Africa's leading provider of content-enabled workflow solutions designed for professionals", reads the biography. The posts encompass news links and information relating to upcoming seminars. The service has 10 followers.

Blog – www.law24.com

Although this isn't blogging by the publisher for which I was primarily looking, the Law24 facility is a LexisNexis initiative. The homepage offers links to (a) topical matters such as employment, financial, family and property matters ; (b) "Ask the Experts" with current posts relating to paternity tests, rental deposits and restraining orders ; (c) latest news ; and, finally, my revised target: (d) "Latest Blog Entries".

Ten most recent blog posts are visible and the standard layout includes tags and government gazette references. For comparative purposes, the subjects included :

- Violence in public schools / Saber Ahmed Jazbhay. 10-11-2010. (Reference to a recent WCC judgment in which the responsibility of the education department to protect teachers was raised) ;
- SA Customs modernization amendments published / Leon Marais. 31-10-2010. (Four of the top ten blog posts were by this author on the same subject, indicative of frequent updates) ;
- Cohabitation / Roy Bregman. 31-10-2010. (Legal status) ;
- About debt counselling or restructuring / Saber Ahmed Jazbhay. 27-10-2010. (Responsibility of consumers) ;
- Settlement agreement : divorce / Bertus Prellier. 02-10-2011. (Link to full post) ;
- House lease / Roy Bregman. 27-09-2010. (Reference to Rental Housing Act) ;
- Shared parenting after divorce / Bertus Prellier. 27-09-2010. (Explanation of arrangement).

LexisNexis actively promotes blogging among attorneys ¹ and ² and, as you can read in the former, Law24.com has recorded more than 20 000 unique visitors a month. The article goes on "the site boasts web 2.0 technologies that enable engagement with potential clients through blogs, forums and a panel of experts".

Personal observations

An extremely informative website but my first impression was of a cluttered homepage which took some visual navigation before I found what I wanted. I'm very aware of how difficult it is to design a webpage that incorporates a lot of links without overwhelming the visitor but I hope subsequent visits will be more expeditious. I was looking for blogging by the publisher rather than by lawyers. There were no links from the publisher's main website to these extremely useful services. If you as the consumer aren't using either of these forums, what's holding you back?

<http://www.sabinet.co.za/>

Facebook –

www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=54026203978&v=info

"A group for staff and clients, past and present, old and young, witty and dull, trendy and shy, or simply all who love the fantastic organization that is Sabinet Online Ltd". Contact details include physical, web- and email addresses. The profile has 31 members.

Twitter - @SabinetLaw

"South African government, parliamentary and legislative information by Sabinet" says the biography. 84 individuals follow this profile which posts news items, although I find the legislative updates the strongest drawcard.

Blog – <http://blog.sabinet.co.za>

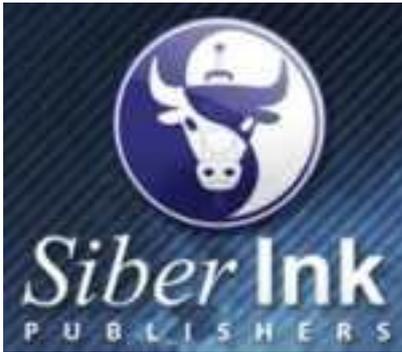

To the uninitiated, the blog is called Chatter Box and describes its raison d'être this way : "Chatter Box is our Sabinet newsletter. Here we want to discuss and share all sorts of company as well as industry related news and facts. Chatter Box will keep you up to date with Sabinet products, people, clients, chairperson's fund activities and industry news (including technology and marketing)". This blog is RSS enabled which is a huge plus in my list of criteria : who has time to constantly check for new posts when they can be automatically processed in one's own reader?

At the time of my visit posts related to Sabinet's support for a CANSA cupcake initiative (15-11-2010), nominations for OCLC delegates (12-10-2010), and a news item on the donation of ten computers to a rural school by the Sabinet Chairperson's fund (09-11-2010). The nature of these posts was refreshing in that I wasn't sure what to expect and found variety and news I hadn't read elsewhere.

Once again, oh dear, where are the supporters and makers of comments?

There are no links from the main website to the Facebook or Twitter profiles or the blog which is a pity as these services deserve to be more "in our face".

<http://www.siberink.co.za/>

Facebook – www.facebook.com/pages/Westlake-South-Africa/Siber-Ink-Publishers/44686391963?v=info

"Quality niche South African law and business publishers since 2000", says the biography. Contact details include physical, telephone, web- and email addresses. 59 people support the profile.

The Wall includes frequent posts with links to a wide variety of relevant news items. The Notes area at the time of my visit related mainly to environmental matters, including notifications of Cormac Cullinan's radio broadcast and 50/50 debate, and a link to Anne Skelton's blog post on children's rights. This area of the Facebook profile is generated by the Book.co.za blog, details of which appear below. Ooh visitors – no comments here either.

Twitter - @SiberInk

"Siber Ink – South African Law Publishers" reads the profile. As a follower I find a broad spectrum of relevant news items are posted fairly frequently. There are 51 followers.

And here I met my comeuppance in this particular quest as Siber Ink has two blogs.

<http://www.siberink.co.za/siber-ink-blog> makes use of the Creative Commons licensing system and is proving to be the source of numerous topical posts by prominent personalities in the legal world. Recent examples are Anne Skelton's post Children's Rights and the Freedom of Expression (03-11-2010), Judge Malcolm Wallis on Reform of the Costs Regime (02-11-2010) and Jeremy Gauntlett SC on the law and land seizure in Zimbabwe (18-10-2010).

<http://siberink.book.co.za/blog> is the source of Facebook Notes as I mentioned earlier and includes a weekly summary of Twitter updates posted by Siber Ink.

I found Siber Ink's integration of various applications a lesson in what can be accomplished by even a relatively small team and an encouragement to us all. While the main website links to Twitter, the link to Facebook is so tiny that I'd have missed it if I wasn't using <ctrl F> - yes, I've started wearing glasses selectively but I still think it's too small! I'd really like to see RSS feeds from those blogs as there is a ton of information that deserves to be even more readily seen.

The publishers are making use of Web 2.0 but it is disappointing that, across the board, so few members of the information sector are supporting these initiatives. Let's get out there and 'befriend', 'follow', 'like' and comment. We will be the winners.

2010 has been a chequered year but it is ending on a series of remarkably positive events for me. I would like to thank the OSALL community once again for their continued support and email correspondence that frequently follows the publication of the newsletter; input and feedback are vital.

My daughter currently has one exam left in her school career, has been accepted to study at UKZN next year, we're moving home next week and I have friends who continually amaze me. All in all, I can only wish for a similar year for all of us in 2011 – and bucket loads of chocolate at affordable prices. If the predicted chocolate crisis is to be, let us go down in an explosion of calories.

Opinions expressed in this column are my own and not necessarily those of my employer.
